A process facilitated by a trained restorative practitioner to repair harm, achieve a sense of healing for those harmed, and restore the greater community.

Proven conflict management approach applicable in a variety of settings, including neighborhoods, criminal justice, schools, families, groups, and workplaces.
How Restorative Conferencing Works

Those directly involved and affected by the incident are invited, as well as supporters and representatives from organizations that attendees may find beneficial.

A neutral third party facilitates the conference at a convenient location (library, community center, school, Mediation Center, etc.).

Each participant discusses what occurred, how they were affected, define how to repair the harm, and work together to define a better path forward.

Benefits & Outcomes

- Allows space for the facilitator and others who care to ask questions and identify and address the root causes of harmful behaviors
- Opportunity for responsible parties to take accountability for their actions
- Provides space for the harmed participants to voice their experience
- Opportunity to repair relationships with the ultimate goal of healthier communities

Over 90% of conferences result in agreements and over 93% of parties are compliant to the agreement.
